Free trade between EU and MERCOSUR -

Impact of free trade, liberalization and privatization on development and human rights

At the I. Summit of Heads of State of the EU, Latin America and the Caribbean in Rio de Janeiro in June of 1999, the EU and the MERCOSUR had accorded the modalities for the negotiations on an "Interregional Association Agreement." Since the end of 1999 half-yearly negotiation rounds on the mutual liberalization of markets take place. After having set the course with respect to the political dialogue and cooperation at the II. Summit in Madrid in May of 2002, the III. Summit is of particular relevance with regards to the political embodiment of trade liberalization. According to official statements the agreement between MERCOSUR and EU will be signed already in the course of this year.

Following the initiative of EU-Commissioner in charge of External Relations, Chris Patten, the III. Summit of Heads of State from the EU, Latin America and the Caribbean, which will take place in Mexico at the end of May of 2004, attempts to make the issue of "social cohesion" a central topic of the summit, apart from the political and the free trade-agenda.

The conference organized by the Heinrich Böll Foundation (hbs) and the Center for Research and Documentation Chile - Latin America (FDCL) tries to investigate the impact of free trade, liberalization, privatization and foreign investment on development and human rights, by means of reviewing concrete cases of countries and sectors. Special attention will be given to the differing interests of the EU and the MERCOSUR with regards to the agricultural sector and the consequences of the liberalization of the drinking water market. National and international approaches and mechanisms for the protection of human rights will also be treated.
